

The Week

Semper ubi sub ubi

ICT Press Holdings

Saturday, January 28, AS XLVI

since AS XLIII

Crown of Lochac to travel to Southron Gaard

According to highly placed sources within the Royal household, the newly crowned Sovereigns of Lochac will begin their reign with a visit to the lands of Southron Gaard. Still recovering from recent border skirmishes against forces led by the self-proclaimed generals Mercalli and Richter, the lands of Southron Gaard have been left in a heavily damaged state; yet morale in these lands remains high with the forthcoming investiture of a new Baron and Baronesse. A visit by the Crown will provide a clear message of the stability that the Kingdom brings to these lands, as the populace begins the rebuild of their broken towers.

Merchants and pilgrims are becoming commonplace on the roads leading to Canterbury, leading some tavern folk to request assistance from local independent breweries as they prepare for the inevitable demand on services. This move is not without risk, however, as in living memory a beer concocted with chillies laid waste to a number of households. Calls for an inquiry into the episode remain as yet unanswered.

Politarhopolis declares independence

In a move which has taken many observers by surprise, the newly named Autonomous Commune of Politarhopolis has apparently declared independence following the omission of the Barony from the recently announced "Stars of Lochac". Surrounded on all sides by the newly bannered forces, sources within the Commune are reportedly planning to receive refugees should war break out amongst the other factions. -LP

Travelling this summer?

If you are planning a trip away this summer, heading to war, or attending the Southron Gaard investiture, here are a few travel tips from our experts:

- Don't drink the Biiiiu
- Do drink plenty of water
- Don't believe everything you read
- Know where your towel is
- Banco di Don Iulio shares are good credit in diverse parts

Kingdom weather

Southron Gaard: Fine, with cool evenings

Ildhafn: Cloudy, with passing showers

Darton: Winds freshening, some chance of late rain

Mordenuale: Clear skies and a light sea breeze

(No other reports were received this quarter)